SATURDAY, MARCH 26, 1892.

[illegible]

Mr. Cleveland has not yet signified, even to the City Democracy the half in which he intends of accepting what counsel of moderation is the best for him and honor to make capital? If so the duty of the hours is plainly plain.

Baron Rothschild's policy: Cheap old artifacts shall be attempted; dear work rather shall not be bought at the glasses and have to answered as it is said. But those who established that have found to be honorable and delectable; that country, industry, and efficiency are the surest help which crown the house of patience gentlemen.

Mr. Cleveland keenly alive to the politicians there for the Democracy as did Gen. Grant, a year since, that the Democratic nomination the needs best out of wrecking the shining career of the senator. He thought the best would have been found for much lower, and there have for years devoted to the there as a man of $10,000 per annum.

The Independents Second Congressional have warned all the Democratic of the Lingle Campaign Committee who were asking for contributions. It would add nothing to their honors or office under the present Administration to protect expenses of one dime, and Democrats here were wrong enough to see that it would be wasted. They have gone to work for Lingle as hard as ever Democrats did for the success of the administration against the Republicans. It would not be wise to have a Democrat in office who was not willing to do his best for the party.

Mr. Cleveland's friends in Chicago are said to be very much pleased with the letter written by Mr. Gresham declining to be a candidate for the Presidency. They say that it is a straightforward statement of the case, and that it will have a good effect upon the people. Mr. Gresham's friends here say that they are not surprised at the letter, as they knew that he would decline to be a candidate. They say that he has no desire to be President, and that he will not be a candidate.

Nobody is surprised that Mr. Gresham has declined to be a candidate for President. He has never been a candidate, and has never said that he would be a candidate. He has always been a Republican, and has always been a Republican. He has always been a Republican, and has always been a Republican. He has always been a Republican, and has always been a Republican.

Mr. Gresham's letter declining to be a candidate for President is a very good letter. It is a very good letter. It is a very good letter. It
